Comment_description: I am against Qwest being deregulated. I am not going to give up my two-landlines for a cell phone and feel if Qwest is allowed to deregulate my cost will go up prohibitively. I feel this is a veiled attempt to raise our landline rates as they see fit to make up for their poor management of the company.

Comment_description: As a retired senior citizen living in Idaho, I donot think that the basic land line phone service should be deregulated.If Qwest wants to be in competition with the cell phone compsnies, then let then build the facilities necessary to compete with the wireless services. I have a cell phone, but it is not my primary phone. The cell phone and the land based lines are two different customers.

Sincerely
Martin L. Downey

Comment_description: I have written previously regarding my opposition to de-regulating the phone rates by Qwest. An article in this morning's Statesman on the front page of the Local section raised my ire a bit more. It states that consumers need to file claims by Feb. 3rd against Qwest "as part of a settlement between the state and the company over UNAUTHORIZED CHARGES AND DECEPTIVE SALES PRACTICES." This is a company that states it needs deregulation in order to compete with wireless providers?! Actually what Qwest is asking for is a blank check to further defraud it's "customers". This is also the same company that had to re-state it's earnings. They seem to have a proven track record of misinformation. This would seem to be the LAST company that could be counted on to act in anybody's interests but it's own and they are a shining example why regulation is needed in the first place!!
